Among of a huge crowd all over the world, some people have successfully started their firm, including Apple established by a renowned person, Steve Jobs, as well as Microsoft set up by Jobs' rival, Bill Gates. I talked to myself with confidence, "I will absolutely become one of them, a successful entrepreneur in the future!"

For the purpose of achieving my fulfillment, I have been conceived of the company I want to create for a quite long time. My first priority was to carry out a survey over the successful. Observing those remarkable firms in the world, I found that those companies have something in common, such as recruiting talents positively and managing assignments appropriately. "That's probably a tip to success. I will keep it deeply in my mind," I mumbled.

In addition, I preferred to create my own style rather than just imitating others. I was eager for a warm atmosphere; therefore, I would like to recruit the employees and treat them like my family. "What else can I do?" I asked myself. Later, some ideas came to my mind. I could place a sofa in the middle of the office for the purpose of having a place that everyone could chatting with each other during the lunch time.

There is nothing definitely happen in the future; all I can do is cherish what I own as well as carry out what I dream, such as creating a company. Like Steve Jobs and Bill Gates, I want to start my first step just now. There is never "impossible", but always "I'm possible"!
